In tandem with its academic imprint of Strategic Information and Research Development Centre (SIRD), Gerak Budaya publishes thought-provoking books on Malaysian politics, history, culture and society, with hopes to generate progressive discussions. On weekends, after working up an appetite, make way to Projek Dapur Umar café for a spot of refreshment.

owned by a couple hailing from a journalism background, that specialises in handpicked English literary books. From classics to the contemporary, from collectors' items to new launches, this bibliophile haven frequently organises author sessions and book discussions with renowned writers, nurturing a community filled with a robust love for books and wide-ranging current issues, peppering its bright and cheery space.

Describing itself as a modest bookstore, Tintabudi is by no means small at heart, with a wealth of knowledge it's eager to spread. You'll find probing books on philosophy, arts, history and literature that also promotes Malaysiana themes. From used books to collectibles, curious readers who step in are privy to rare gems containing eye-opening explorations, and a chance to rub shoulders with radical thinkers of this era. Brush up on your academia at Tintabudi or check out one of their readings and thought-provoking discussions.

They pride themselves as the leading publishers of Malaysian writing in English; their first book, the Silverfish New Writing 1, introduced an anthology of short stories. Here, you'll find rare titles unavailable in mainstream bookstores, handpicked 'for people who like to read by people who read.' Till today, Silverfish Books upholds Malaysia's history, heritage and ideas through a buzz of activities.

RIWAYAT

Charming little store with inviting glass doors carries fiction and non-fiction books in English and Malay and covers a range of genres – literature, culture, history, poetry, biographies and travelogues. There are also rare books and magazines. "Researchers and scholars would also find something of interest in our store, especially on topics concerning Malaysia and South East Asia." The owner said the bookstore's name "Riwayat", the Malay word for 'narrative', has special meaning. "It's because we all have stories to tell, just like the books here, as well as the heritage area it's located at.
